Faith for Families - Teaching the Faith Through Example - Catholic parents' role involves teaching the faith not just through formal instruction, but through the way parents live their daily lives. Children learn more from what they see their parents do than from what they hear their parents say. Catholic parents should model Christian virtues such as love, patience, forgiveness, generosity, and service to others. They should also help their children understand how their faith relates to their school life, their relationships, their hobbies, and their future plans. This integration helps children understand that being Catholic is not just something they do on Sundays, but a way of life that affects every aspect of their existence.
